General Comment: I am opposed to requiring any more information from people booking air travel.

There is already too much information collected, and adding more is totally uncalled for. We are supposed to be living in a free society that respects the privacy of it's citizens, not a police state. There is also the issue of protecting that data once it is collected, and making sure it is not used for any other purpose.

TSA wants this same information, and more, for it's profiling program which is another unwarranted intrusion into people's lives. Once any data is collected for any purpose, the people surrendering that data lose all control over it.
